

These are very commonly used data types; connecting these to everything else would be very messy and doesn't provide much value.

You may see `builder()` in many of the Database items and queries. These will be autogenerated according to the builder pattern (not covered in class), and so are not included in the UML.

